

A.A. as a Resource for the Health Care
Professional

This is A.A. General Service Conference-approved literature.

ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS[®] is a fellowship of men and women who share their experience, strength and hope with each other that they may solve their common problem and help others to recover from alcoholism.

- The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop drinking. There are no dues or fees for A.A. membership; we are self-supporting through our own contributions.
- A.A. is not allied with any sect, denomination, politics, organization or institution; does not wish to engage in any controversy; neither endorses nor opposes any causes.
- Our primary purpose is to stay sober and help other alcoholics to achieve sobriety.

A.A. as a Resource for the Health Care Professional

From the Big Book,
Alcoholics
Anonymous,
A.A.
Members
State:

“We alcoholics are men and women who have lost the ability to control our drinking. We know that no real alcoholic ever recovers control. All of us felt at times that we were regaining control, but such intervals — usually brief — were inevitably followed by still less control, which led in time to pitiful and incomprehensible demoralization.”

Alcoholics Anonymous, p. 30

The explanation that seems to make sense to most A.A. members is that alcoholism is an illness, a progressive illness, which can never be cured but which, like some other diseases, can be arrested. Going one step further, many A.A. members feel that the illness represents a combination of a physical sensitivity to alcohol and a mental obsession with drinking, which, regardless of consequences, cannot be broken by willpower alone.

“Physicians who are familiar with alcoholism agree there is no such thing as making a normal drinker out of an alcoholic.” (ibid, p. 31)*

*The definition of alcoholism as defined by the American Society of Addiction Medicine and the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence: “Alcoholism is a primary, chronic disease with genetic, psychosocial, and environmental factors influencing its development and manifestations. The disease is often progressive and fatal. It is characterized by impaired control over drinking, preoccupation with the drug alcohol, use of alcohol despite adverse consequences, and distortions in thinking, most notably denial. Each of these symptoms may be continuous or periodic.” (1992)

The Alcoholic's Resistance to Help Can be Frustrating

Since denial of the problem is symptomatic of alcoholism, alcoholics tend to be evasive when questioned about their drinking, and some health care professionals may not recognize that alcoholism may be contributing to their symptoms. Most alcoholics will resist any suggestion that alcoholism is involved and may be equally resistant to the suggestion of Alcoholics Anonymous as a last recourse.

Few health care professionals have had the experience of having their diagnosis rejected. Few have been told, "I certainly am not a diabetic." Yet when the health care professional makes a diagnosis of alcoholism, an alcoholic will often respond, "I don't drink that much," or may say, "I'm not that bad," or will offer excuses for his or her drinking. Health care professionals can expect and anticipate this.

Rationalization and denial are part of the alcoholic's illness. Initial rejection of A.A. is part of the denial mechanism.

A.A. members, having broken through their denial and faced the harm in their drinking, are particularly suited to helping others break through their denial.

Some Common Objections to A.A.

"It's too religious."

In fact, A.A. is not a religious program, but a spiritual fellowship. It refers to a "Higher Power" and "God as we understand Him," but no belief in God is necessary; atheists and agnostics find plenty of company in A.A.

As stated in the A.A. Preamble (which appears on the inside cover of this brochure): “A.A. is not allied with any sect, denomination, politics, organization or institution...”

“I don’t want to stand up and bare my soul in front of a lot of other people.”

Only those who wish to do so speak at A.A. meetings.

“I don’t want to meet with a lot of losers. It’s too depressing.”

A.A. more accurately represents a cross-section of “winners,” in the sense that they have survived the disease. Those who go to enough meetings are sure to find people with whom they can identify.

“I can’t go there. All those people are sober and I’m not. I’d be too ashamed.”

The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop drinking. Members who are still drinking are encouraged to “keep coming back.” Anybody who has a desire to stop drinking will be genuinely welcomed at an A.A. meeting. Sober alcoholics are not going to sit in judgment of someone who cannot stop drinking, since not being able to stop drinking is what brought them to A.A.

“I don’t want everyone to know about my drinking.”

Anonymity is and always has been the basis of the A.A. program. Traditionally, A.A. members never disclose their association with the movement in print, on the air, or through any other public medium. And no one has the right to break the anonymity of another member anywhere.

What Some
Health Care
Professionals Have Learned;
How They Apply that Knowledge

Many health care professionals have found effective ways to refer people to A.A. One said:

“No one suffers more than the alcoholic. When you once touch the life of an alcoholic and help him or her to recover, when you observe this incredible change from a suffering, helpless, sick (and dying) person to one who is alive, vital, functioning, and happy, you will be part of a rich, rewarding, and profound experience. A.A. is the most effective means of helping an alcoholic to stop drinking.”

Another physician suggests health care professionals should attend open A.A. meetings, as it is extremely difficult to feel confident in referring someone to an organization about which the health care professional has little information. This health care professional finds it helpful to have a list of A.A. contacts available to take people to their first meeting. She suggests specific inquiries as to which meetings have been attended, how frequently, and whether the client has obtained an A.A. sponsor to serve as a link to the Fellowship and help the client work a program of recovery. Whether the alcoholic is suffering from a diseased liver or an emotional depression, getting him or her sober is the first step toward recovery. Wherever he or she lives, there is sure to be an

A.A. meeting nearby for help in maintaining sobriety.

A.A. and Alcoholism

From the beginning, A.A. members have regarded alcoholism as an illness. Alcoholics cannot control their drinking because they are ill in their bodies and in their minds (or emotions). Most A.A. members have found that spiritual deficiencies also characterize their illness.

Members of A.A. also have found that effective recovery can only begin with a “self-diagnosis”; that is, with a recognition by the alcoholic of A.A.’s First Step: “We admitted we were powerless over alcohol — that our lives had become unmanageable.”

A.A. members also have found that recovery involves abstinence from alcohol, and that abstinence on a long-term basis requires fundamental changes in relationships with oneself, with others, and with some power greater than oneself. That is because it is the experience of Alcoholics Anonymous members that an alcoholic can never safely drink again.

A.A. members believe that once an alcoholic, always an alcoholic, i.e., that no matter how long a person is abstinent, if that person drinks again, the individual will have the same disastrous response to alcohol that characterized the preabstinence drinking. Thus, A.A. does not offer a cure, but, rather, a continuing process of recovery through the simple principle of not drinking one day at a time.

Researchers, health care professionals and others concerned with alcoholism have a legitimate and natural concern with identifying the causes of alcoholism. For the program of Alcoholics Anonymous, causes are not only considered irrelevant but also as possibly distracting from undertaking the straightforward abstinence and recovery program.

Attending the First A.A. Meeting

When health care professionals recommend A.A., neither they nor the alcoholic should base their opinion of the effectiveness of A.A. on one or two meetings, but should give A.A. a fair trial. Important in this process is obtaining a sponsor, even on a temporary basis. Having someone attend his or her first A.A. meeting with a member is desirable, though not a must. Most newcomers have many questions. The sponsor can answer these and reassure the newcomer that others have experienced the same reluctance and fear in taking a first step toward recovery. Sharing experience as peers is the unique service Alcoholics Anonymous offers. With no membership requirements beyond the desire to stop drinking, members are on an equal footing. What's important is getting the help that is needed, and in most instances, health care professionals find A.A. members not only willing but eager to introduce newcomers to the A.A. program.

The health care professional who works closely with Alcoholics

Anonymous in his or her community is in a key position to provide leadership, education and support in an area which will pay great dividends in the quality of care and rates of recovery of alcoholics. We invite health care professionals to visit an open meeting and see what A.A. offers the alcoholic.

Singleness of Purpose and Problems Other than Alcoholism

Some professionals refer to alcoholism and drug addiction as “substance abuse,” “substance use disorder” or “chemical dependency.” Nonalcoholics are, therefore, sometimes introduced to A.A. and encouraged to attend A.A. meetings. Nonalcoholics may attend open A.A. meetings as observers, but only those with a drinking problem may attend closed meetings.

How to Contact A.A.

Alcoholics Anonymous can be found on the Internet at aa.org and in most telephone directories by looking for “Alcoholics Anonymous.” Additionally, online A.A. meetings are available, which members of the military and others often use when they are in places where there are no meetings nearby. Some health care professionals ask the person they are referring to dial the local A.A. number while still in the office, thus offering an immediate opportunity to reach out for help. Some simply include A.A. in their treatment plan.

Members of A.A.’s local Cooperation with the Professional Community Committee can be a helpful resource for members of the health care community.

Members of A.A.'s local Treatment Facilities Committee can also be helpful if you have a client in a treatment facility.

Many local A.A. service committees will, upon request, provide informational presentations for your organization. Sessions can be tailored to meet your needs. A typical agenda might include one of several A.A. films and a presentation by one or more A.A. members on "What A.A. Is and What It Is Not."

Please check your local telephone directory, the Internet or newspaper for the number of Alcoholics Anonymous.

THE TWELVE STEPS OF ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS

1. We admitted we were powerless over alcohol — that our lives had become unmanageable.

2. Came to believe that a Power greater than ourselves could restore us to sanity.

3. Made a decision to turn our will and our lives over to the care of God as we understood Him.

4. Made a searching and fearless moral inventory of ourselves.

5. Admitted to God, to ourselves, and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs.

6. Were entirely ready to have God remove all these defects of character.

7. Humbly asked Him to remove our shortcomings.

8. Made a list of all persons we had harmed, and became willing to make amends to them all.

9. Made direct amends to such people wherever possible, except when to do so would injure them or others.

10. Continued to take personal inventory and when we were wrong promptly admitted it.

11. Sought through prayer and meditation to improve our conscious contact with God as we understood Him, praying only for knowledge of His will for us and the power to carry that out.

12. Having had a spiritual awakening as the result of these steps, we tried to carry this message to alcoholics, and to practice these principles in all our affairs.

THE TWELVE TRADITIONS OF ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS

1. Our common welfare should come first; personal recovery depends upon A.A. unity.

2. For our group purpose there is but one ultimate authority — a loving God as He may express Himself in our group conscience. Our leaders are but trusted servants; they do not govern.

3. The only requirement for A.A. membership is a desire to stop drinking.

4. Each group should be autonomous except in matters affecting other groups or A.A. as a whole.

5. Each group has but one primary purpose — to carry its message to the alcoholic who still suffers.

6. An A.A. group ought never endorse, finance or lend the A.A. name to any related facility or outside enterprise, lest problems of money, property and prestige divert us from our primary purpose.

7. Every A.A. group ought to be fully self-supporting, declining outside contributions.

8. Alcoholics Anonymous should remain forever nonprofessional, but our service centers may employ special workers.

9. A.A., as such, ought never be organized; but we may create service boards or committees directly responsible to those they serve.

10. Alcoholics Anonymous has no opinion on outside issues; hence the A.A. name ought never be drawn into public controversy.

11. Our public relations policy is based on attraction rather than promotion; we need always maintain personal anonymity at the level of press, radio and films.

12. Anonymity is the spiritual foundation of all our Traditions, ever reminding us to place principles before personalities.
