Convention tales: A woman shared about how she made going to the International Convention a priority. She was an older woman, not someone who had a lot of money, and she was raising her grandchildren, so money was tight. She spoke about how she would make a commitment to go because it was important to her sobriety. She said her HP was in charge and was willing to do the footwork by putting money each week into a coffee can. It quickly added up to support her sober adventure.
